Now, this year, just as Christmas approached, we got a nice note from someone not at all in the produce industry:

_I really enjoyed the post on your website about Dan Fogelberg’s “Same old Lang Syne.” I came across it when writing the screenplay for my short film last year! I wanted to send you along the film should you want to see how it turned out._

_Thanks so much for the article you wrote years ago._

_Merry Christmas!_
—Jordan Crowder

Jordan Crowder is well known as a director, writer, producer and editor. You can see some of his projects.

He also hosts the Gentleman Scofflaw Podcast, which is promoted as For the Rebel and the Renaissance Man.

You can also see the EPK or Electronic Press Kit for the film here.

Many will recognize his last name, as those who are politically engaged will know his brother, Steven Crowder of Louder with Crowder fame.

In any case, we always make a point of learning from non-produce sources. So it is nice to know when one of them actually learns a bit from us!

Wishing everyone the best of the Holiday Season!
